Seeds of Peace, a nonprofit organization aimed at promoting peace in regions of conflict through youth leadership programs, held the 'Peace Market' at Cipriani Wall Street. Business leader and philanthropist Ivanka Trump attended and served as Honorary Chairperson. The event was hosted by the Young Leadership Committee a volunteer group of young professionals whose mission is to promote Seeds of Peace across a variety of industries in New York City and other major cities across America.

In the wake of the horrific attacks in Mumbai, India as well as the crisis in Gaza and Southern Israel, it is more important than ever to promote dialogue among young people and between supposed "enemies." Seeds of Peace operates a summer camp in Miane and offices in the Middle east (Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Ramallah, Gaza, Cairo, Amman) and South Asia (Kabul, Mumbai, Lahore) to bring young people together from opposite sides of the conflict for face-to-face coexistence programs.

Young leaders from the Middle East and South Asia, called 'Seeds', were also in attendance and participated as featured speakers. Over 1,000 young professionals from New York attended. For more information please visit: www.seedsofpeace.org or call 212 573 8040.
