Judy Schrafft is a fascinating woman. She loves to travel and seems to be perfectly at ease in either her Palm Beach home or a fisherman's hut on a deserted beach. She dives year round, and has written two wonderful books, Other Places and Places, that either awaken one's wonderlust for foreign places or makes one grateful for American plumbing.

For 30 years she has regularly dived off Palm Beach. Alarmed when she discovered a massive decrease in the number of dead shells that she found during these dives, Judy extrapolated the existence of a serious threat to the whole ecosystem. It is Judy's belief that human development and beach renourishment are wreaking havoc on Palm Beach's reef, the northernmost reef system in America.

Judy is constantly active in the defense of the environment.

Help may be at hand!!

Jack Hanna, Dr. Lapointe and Nigel Cosans are planning to produce a new TV series that combines their experiences in order to educate the public in the need for reef preservation.

Jack Hanna is famous for his work in preserving wildlife. Dr. Lapointe is internationally acclaimed for his work in the Florida Keys and Tobago. Nigel Cosans has produced TV specials for 21st Century Television which are credited with causing the Tobago government to implement important new reef preservation measures.
