Kerri Burrus - World BillFish Series Top Female Angler, fishing in Panama

Richard Jabara and Karen Amato at the opening of The Intercontinental Playa Bonita Resort

Panama ...the little country in Central America has transformed herself into a first class retirement paradise . It is 7 seven years since Bill Clinton turned the Panama Canal back over to the Panamanians, and many Americans taking advantage of the 'Pensionada' visa program are enjoying a wonderful retirement with the added advantage of receiving 30% discount on utility bills and 35% discount on medical and dental services, these prices are generally already 50% less than in America and the majority of senior medical staff are American schooled.

With the opening of John Hopkins Hospital in Panama City in March, the opening of the INTERCONTINENTAL PLAYA BONITA RESORT (a 300 room 5 star beach front resort and spa) last December and the laying of the first cornerstone of Donald Trump's second biggest real estate project in the world happening in Panama City this November, first world service can be enjoyed while only paying a dollar for a taxi ride in the Manhattan type skyline of Panama city. .

Panama is also a relatively new tourist destination catering more to the adventure tourism, quietly developing into the best sport fishing destination in the world.

Recently Kerri Burrus, the number one female angler came to Panama. She is from New Orleans, Louisiana, in her mid 30's participating in the predominantly male sport of Big Game Fishing. She is fishing a worldwide circuit called the World Billfish Series.

Nigel Cosans who lives between Panama and Palm Beach arranges regular trips to Panama which can combine a vacation and real estate visits. He can also assist with purchasing property and finding local sources. Monthly exotic fishing adventures are extremely popular.
